INTRODUCTION

And the truth is, the power of empathy can lead to collective action that can save lives and change the world.

“We should be there to support people when they need us desperately in emergencies, remain to support communities while their capacities are enhanced, and leave as they become independent. We should avoid creating dependency as it only weakens nations and communities.”

This is the way MERCY Malaysia works.

Invest in humanity

Millions of people around the world are affected by conflict and disaster. They urgently need our support, solidarity and help to survive and be protected. Amidst dipping funding and stretched resources, MERCY Malaysia had continued to conduct humanitarian relief in disaster and conflict affected localities both in Malaysia and abroad. At the same time, we continued serving communities in need such as the urban poor, refugees and displaced peoples, who have little access to good medical services, education and shelter. Our humanitarian response plans are complete, prioritised and ready to implement. They are reliable, effective and efficient investments to get communities back on their feet, becoming more resilient and add self-reliance in the long run. However, acting upon these requires political, institutional and financial investment. To reduce the funding gap for humanitarian needs and to act on our responsibility to vulnerable people, we need to shift to humanitarian financing that also invests in local capacities, is risk-informed, invests in fragile situations and incentivizes collective outcomes. This means increasing funding not only to response, but also to developments, to risk reduction and preparedness, to protracted conflicts and to peacebuilding. MERCY Malaysia's humanitarian programs are designed to be sustainable to the community, and reflect the Sustainable Development Goals. Your investment in humanity will support vital humanitarian operations globally.

Yemen humanitarian crisis

The United Nations has warned that an estimated 24 million people – close to 80 per cent of the population – need assistance and protection in Yemen. With famine threatening hundreds of thousands of lives, humanitarian aid is increasingly becoming the only lifeline for millions across the count.

2 ZERO HUNGER	3 GOOD HEALTH AND WELL-BEING

The mass human exodus that began last autumn from Myanmar to Bangladesh has turned Cox's Bazar into the world's largest refugee settlement. In total, around 900,000 refugees from Myanmar are currently sheltering in Bangladesh, and humanitarian organisations are overwhelmed by the vast scale of needs. In addition, more than half of the Rohingya refugees in the camps are children.

PROGRAMS

1. Comprehensive primary health centre

Located along the typhoon belt in the Pacific, the Philippines is visited by an average of 20 typhoons every year, five of which are destructive. Being situated in the “Pacific Ring of Fire” makes it vulnerable to frequent earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. Its geographical location and physical environment also contributes to its high-susceptibility to tsunami, sea level rise, storm surges, landslides, flood and drought.

Urban poor programs in Malaysia

While Malaysia has done remarkably well in uplifting the standard of living of its citizens, there are emerging areas of concern that require urgent attention, particularly on the wellbeing of the urban poor population. Increased unemployment and lower incomes in recent times remind us that poverty is not an unchanging attribute of a shrinking group, but rather, a condition that billions of vulnerable persons risk experiencing.

Building Resilient Communities (BRC) Malaysia and ASEAN countries

BRC is a holistic approach towards reducing and managing disaster risks through strategic intervention such as climate change adaptation (CCA) programs, technical assistance, community leadership programs, prevention and mitigation programs, and development initiatives.

It includes all levels of stakeholders in a community to increase capacity and capability by identifying and reducing vulnerability with the objective of building the community's resilience in social well-being and equity, environmental stewardship, and economic prosperity and continuity.

BRC programs and approaches were designed to reflect and deliver commitments from global agendas such as the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction, the Sustainable Development Goals and the New Urban Agenda.
